Read the passage and answer the questions that follow (Questions 18-20): The digital revolution has significantly reshaped the educational landscape in Bangladesh. Remote learning, powered by internet connectivity and digital devices, has made education more accessible to students in both urban and rural areas. This shift is particularly noticeable in the rise of ed-tech platforms offering courses on skill development, language learning, and academic subjects. The integration of multimedia tools and interactive content has made learning more engaging for the younger generation. Furthermore, the government's "Smart Bangladesh" vision is accelerating the adoption of digital classrooms across the country. However, challenges such as the digital divide and unstable internet connections still persist in remote regions. To ensure the long-term success of digital education, the authorities must focus on infrastructure development and providing affordable internet access for all students.

18) What is necessary for the long-term success of digital education in Bangladesh? (English)
