Education plays a vital role in shaping an individual's character and preparing him or her for the challenges of life. In modern society, education is no longer limited to classrooms or textbooks; it has expanded through digital platforms, online courses, and self-directed learning. This transformation has made knowledge more accessible than ever before. However, access alone does not guarantee understanding. True education requires critical thinking, discipline, and the ability to apply knowledge practically. In many developing countries, the education system still faces serious challenges such as lack of resources, outdated curricula, and insufficient teacher training. These limitations often prevent students from developing analytical skills and creativity. Moreover, an excessive focus on examination results discourages learners from exploring ideas independently. Despite these challenges, education remains the most powerful tool for social change. An educated population can make informed decisions, promote democratic values, and contribute to national development. Therefore, governments and institutions must focus on improving the quality of education rather than merely increasing enrollment rates. Only then can education fulfill its true purpose of empowering individuals and transforming societies.

21) The main idea of the passage is that education (English)

- A). should focus only on examinations
- B). must be limited to formal institutions
- C). should develop critical thinking and practical skills
- D). is unnecessary in modern society
